

Table of Contents

Part i

List of Illustrations	Page v
List of Tables	viii
Preface and Acknowledgements	ix

Chapters

1. Introduction: the study of Iron Age coinage in Britain:
I The beginning of Iron Age coin studies	1
II "A firm and secure foundation": the work of Sir John Evans, 1860-1910	2
III Further systematisation and the elaboration of historical paradigm, c 1910-1960	5
IV Developments since 1960: consolidation and reaction	7
V The present study	8
2. An archaeological approach to Iron Age coinage:
I The interpretation of coin finds	13
II A substantivist perspective on Iron Age coinage	17
III Coin use in the Mediterranean world and beyond	23
IV The archaeology of coin production and types	28
3. Analytical procedure and problems:
I Iron Age coin samples: theoretical considerations	33
II The dynamics of coin circulation and deposition	36
III Quantification and statistical manipulation of coin finds	39
IV Analytical procedure	42

4. The structure of the evidence:
I	Introduction	47
II	An approach to the spatial and temporal ordering of Iron Age coinage	48
III	Regional coinage traditions in Iron Age Britain	52
IV	Delineation of the Study Area	54
V	The archaeology of the Study Area (i) south-east England (ii) central southern England	58
VI	Coin finds in the Study Area (a) general considerations (b) analysis of find locations (c) analysis of site finds (d) analysis of stratified finds	63
5. The chronological framework:
I	Introduction	75
II	The origins of the Philippus gold coinage in Gaul	76
III	Period I coinage and its subdivisions	78
IV	Period II coinage and its subdivisions (a) Belgic Gaul (b) Britain (c) absolute dating	80
V	Period III coinage and its subdivisions	92
VI	The archaeological evidence and the dating of subsidiary series (a) the potin series (b) subsidiary silver series	94
6. Depositional patterning in non-settlement contexts:
I	Depositional trends in the recorded find location data	103
II	Hoards and multiple finds	117
III	Non-settlement coin deposition (a) burials (b) temples (c) other contexts	122
V	Discussion	134
7. Settlement finds south of the Thames:
I	Introduction	139

II	The Key Sites (a) Canterbury (b) Silchester and Chichester (c) other Key Sites	139
III	Coin representation on other settlement sites	151
IV	Discussion	157
8.	Settlement finds north of the Thames:
I	Introduction	163
II	The Key Sites (a) Colchester (b) Braughing and St Albans (c) other Key Sites	163
III	Coin representation on other settlement sites	180
IV	Discussion	186
9.	Integration and synthesis: the archaeological context:
I	The adoption of coinage in Britain	189
II	Post-Caesarian developments	195
III	Coinage in the Roman South-East	204
IV	Coin circulation and use: the contribution of archaeology	208
10.	Conclusions and summary	215

Part ii

Appendices

1.	Gazetteer of findspots of Iron Age coins in Britain recorded 1960-1982.	221
2.	Concordance of the chronological and geographical arrangement of Iron Age coinages in Britain used in this study with their classifications according to Allen, Mack and Scheers.	231
3.	Catalogue of hoards and 'multiple finds' of Iron Age coins.	267
4.	Brief listing of known archaeological sites in south-east England where Iron Age coins have certainly or probably been found.	331

5. Catalogue of stratified Iron Age coins and their archaeological context.	359
6. Metrology of the principal Iron Age coin groups found in Britain.	479
Bibliography	487